† Fiscal year-ends differ (AAPL 2026-09-26, MSFT 2026-06-30, NVDA 2026-01-25, GOOGL 2025-12-31, AMZN 2025-12-31), so these latest-fiscal-year periods are not calendar-aligned.

Apple versus Microsoft. Microsoft: revenue 331.8 $B, growth 17.8%, operating margin 46.8%, and net margin 40.3%. Apple: revenue 478.8 $B, growth 15.1%, operating margin 33.0%, and net margin 27.6%.

Across the group. Amazon led on revenue at 716.9 $B; NVIDIA led on growth at 65.5%; NVIDIA led on operating margin at 60.4%. These are reported-accounting comparisons for non-aligned fiscal periods, not measures of valuation or causation.

Method. Size is revenue and total assets. Growth is current revenue divided by the adjacent prior-year comparative in the same 10-K accession, minus one. Operating and net margins divide `OperatingIncomeLoss` and `NetIncomeLoss`, respectively, by revenue. Revenue uses the current 10-K's `Revenues` or `RevenueFromContractWithCustomerExcludingAssessedTax` concept. Amounts are rounded only for display; an unavailable fact is `n/a`, never zero. Fiscal calendars differ, so cross-company comparisons are descriptive rather than perfectly contemporaneous.

Revenue source trail. Each displayed revenue figure below is tied to its original Form 10-K. The complete value-level trail for revenue, prior-year revenue, operating income, net income, and assets—including exact USD values, XBRL tags, period ends, filing dates, and accessions—is in `data/value_trace.csv`.
